In his youth, Charles played football for the famed Morningside Bulldogs. He was a proud Bulldog and kept in touch with his teammates long after his playing days were over. Charles met the love of his life when he was 19 years old, and would be celebrating 60 years of marriage this November. Charles and Marianne raised a family of four children and ten grandchildren. He loved spending time with his family, especially his grandchildren. Charles was passionate about food, spending his days searching the city for new spots to eat and visiting old favorites. Also known by many as "Doc", he was a self-proclaimed food critic and fashioned himself as a professional gambler. He will be remembered for coaching his kids' sports teams, his generosity, his willingness to help others without expecting anything in return and his dedication and loyalty to his family.

Later in life, Charles made sure to attend all of his grandchildren's activities. He was a devoted husband, father, and grandfather. The memories that Charles shared with his family will last for an eternity and be cherished forever. He will be dearly missed.
