During retirement Bob found a love of woodworking. He built a comprehensive shop in his basement and enjoyed the challenge of building one of a kind treasures for friends and family. He also enjoyed getting involved with amateur radios and going to the gun range at the Shongum Sportsmen's Association of north NJ, where he was a member for several years.

In earlier years, Bob enjoyed summer weekends with his family at the local swim club where he spent time playing backgammon and racquetball with his children. In the fall he joined his brothers and other men in the family for the annual camp weekend at the cabin in PA. Camping and fishing with his family, especially his son John, were cherished activities. He loved every moment with his family in Pittsburgh and took great joy in returning to attend family reunions and holiday parties.
