Bill's 65-year career as a building contractor in Pittsburgh was a product of determination and creativity that he shared as a teacher and mentor to many, including his sons, grandsons, and nephews.

Bill/Dad/Uncle Bill/Poppa/Mr. Palmer shared his affection and wisdom in many ways — kisses on the cheek, firm handshakes, pats on the back, perfectly-improvised ghost stories, hilarious wit, special nicknames, or a fresh batch of pizzelles — to everyone fortunate enough to be loved and respected by him.

Bill was a generous, thoughtful, courageous, attentive, self-made, and formidable man, and his memory will be immortal.
