taught high school English until her retirement in 1993. She was passionate about teaching and looked for ways to challenge her students and to help them gain the skills needed for life. Carol was well loved by her students and received many notes of appreciation for how her classes prepared them for college and beyond.

Post retirement, Carol had time to fully enjoy many of her interests and pursue new ones. Carol was an extrovert and enjoyed just being with people. She had numerous friends from her street (Old Village Lane), her church, and the Bethel Park senior community. Carol loved to travel with friends and went on many cruises including those to Hawaii, Alaska, and the Panama Canal. Carol also traveled to Australia and New Zealand with her Old Village Lane gang and even rode a camel. Needless to say, she never had a dull moment. Carol's zest for life was evidenced by the laughter and the stories told at her 80th birthday party.

In the last 4 years of her life, Carol lived at Concordia of the South Hills and made a whole new community of friends, learned mahjong and various new card games, enjoyed playing Bingo, and even volunteered for a few committees. Carol did live life to the fullest.
