Lou was a well-known tailor in Pittsburgh and worked at Bonds and Hughes and Hatcher, finally ending his career at Macy's downtown store as the main fitter in the men's department.

He was a devout Catholic, devoted to his hometown patron saint, St. Anne, and was a faithful viewer of the daily mass at home. He was proud to be head usher for many years at St. Catherine of Siena Church (now St. Teresa of Kolkata Parish), where he was also the cold hand poker dealer at the summer festival.

Lou was also an excellent bowler and bowled in the ISDA league where he was known as Lucky Louie. He rolled a number of 200 games with his unorthodox bocci style of bowling. A member of the ISDA Giuseppe Carducci Lodge #66 and served as financial secretary for many years. He also enjoyed dancing and was a member of the I Campagnolo dance ensemble. Lou was an urban farmer growing tomatoes, zucchini, and figs in his backyard while battling with the local groundhogs.
