

IDA LOUISE LAQUATRA YEAGER

Ida Louise Laquatra Yeager passed away January 18, 2025. She is survived by her husband, Tom Yeager; her grown children, Rachel and Joshua Altares; and her grandson, Zackery Altares. As one of seven children of Jack and Nellie Mekonis LaQuatra, she is also survived by her beloved sisters, Roseanne Laquatra McCampbell, Carolyn Laquatra Dish (Vince Dish) and Lydia-Laquatra Fesler (Paul Fesler); and brother, Paul LaQuatra (Effie Alexander LaQuatra); and countless nieces and nephews.

Ida grew up on the Northside of Pittsburgh, where she constantly and lovingly cared for her siblings. As an adult, she continued to be a stalwart support for her family. A renaissance woman, Ida was also an auto cross driver, a gardener, a small business owner of "Blackberry Farms" with her sister Christine. In addition, Ida was involved in construction sales, and owned a construction material sourcing business since 1990.

Ida did so much, as the list of her accomplishments attests to. However, this doesn't encompass the whole of Ida; a very open minded, non-judgmental soul. She embraced Joshua's musical career and music preferences. She absorbed enormous amounts of information, seemingly through her pores.

Ida was many things to family and friends alike. Cheerful, fun, loving, supportive, dedicated, driven to excellence; all that was Ida. Many, including her husband, her daughter, and her sister, Roseanne, said Ida was their best friend. Her husband added that everyone who met her, loved her. He added, "She was a good person." Ida was her grandson, Zackary's, most thoughtful, loving grandmother.

Those who were fortunate to share a portion of their lives with Ida, will remember her home was a safe harbor for family and friends, and her smile was the beacon that drew us in. Her love of life was evident in all she did. She gave the best she had to offer and it was exclusively "homemade."

To know Ida, was to marvel at her.
