

If you look very closely, you may find your own name lurking in the shadows of the new town.

With thousands of acres of land to be built, the building of a new town is a task that will take years to complete.

Through the years, the town has grown and changed. The old buildings have been replaced by new ones, and the streets have been widened.

The town is now a beautiful place to live and work. It has a rich history and a bright future.

LOST PAINTING of Pittsburgh by my mother, Barbara Boyd, featured on the cover of WQED's magazine, April 1954. Rendered when she was an art student at Carnegie Tech during the Red Scare, the station asked her to change the colors but Prof. Richard Lepper told her to stick to her guns. Have you seen this painting or other artwork by her, signed "Boyd"? School of Art faculty at that time retained the right to keep student work. Where can it be?
