Finally, in a decades-old tradition, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra performs its annual "Messiah" concert with music director Manfred Honeck, vocal soloists and the Mendelssohn Choir of Pittsburgh on Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. in Heinz Hall, complete with the soul-searing "Hallelujah Chorus." (pittsburghsymphony.org)

The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra releases a new album each year, and 2024's offering features Austrian composer Anton Bruckner's Symphony No. 7, which he said came to him in a dream, paired with living American composer Mason Bates' brief "Resurrexit," a musical depiction of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Even casual jazz fans know the names Miles Davis, John Coltrane and Bill Evans. A new book by scholar James Kaplan, 3 Shades of Blue: Miles Davis, John Coltrane, Bill Evans, and the Lost Empire of Cool, explores their lives and legacies, tracing the roots of their creativity to New York and New Orleans and beyond. Streaming services and classical music tend to go together like oil and water because of the way most services like Spotify or Amazon catalog their libraries. Well, Apple has solved this with a dedicated classical music smartphone app, Apple Classical, that lets you search for music by recording or ensemble or composer — it's a more elegant user experience. Give the gift of convenience with a subscription to Apple Classical at just $11 a month. (There is no extra charge for those who already subscribe to Apple Music.)
