If the chef on your list is struggling with a dull-edged box grater they bought at a discount store, up their game with a Microplane Classic Zester and Grater. The thin shape and sharp edges are excellent for zesting citrus, grating cheese or sprinkling a lovely dusting of chocolate shavings over a dessert. Penn Fixture & Supply also has a variety of other Microplane tools, as well as a multitude of items a chef's heart might desire (knives, spatulas, sieves, inexpensive sheet pans in every size). If you're preparing a holiday meal, you might want to equip your own kitchen here, too. (Penn Fixture & Supply, Strip District or microplane.com)

If you know someone in a part of the country sadly deprived of a Primanti Bros. or Prantl's Bakery, the food-delivery company Goldbelly can fix that. The Primanti Bros. Pastrami Sandwich Pack comes with the fixings to feed four people — including bread, meat, cheese, hot sauce, two tomatoes, french fries and coleslaw. Shipping sandwiches across the country frankly strikes me as a dubious idea, except for the desperately homesick. A better idea might be to send a Prantl's burnt almond torte ($86), which serves up to 10 people. It arrives frozen, with instructions on how to revive it. Of course, if you and your giftee both live in Pittsburgh, you can pick up and deliver these items fresh yourself, no assembly or defrosting required. (goldbelly.com.)
